Quick Facts

Special Olympics Alberta offers sports programs in 114 communities around the province for Albertans with intellectual disabilities of all ages. Since Special Olympics Alberta was founded in 1980, it has grown from an organization with only a few dozen athletes, to one in which more than 3,000 athletes compete in 15 official sports and three unofficial sports. There are more than 1,500 volunteers working year-round to provide training, life-skills coaching and nutrition programs. Competitions take place at the local, provincial, and national levels at regular intervals. Through Special Olympics, athletes develop sport skills, social skills, and self esteem which assist them in becoming actively involved in recreational, educational and employment opportunities in their communities. Special Olympics promotes an active lifestyle and better quality of life for persons with intellectual disabilities through their participation in sport.

In 2009, the Law Enforcement Torch Run raised over $34 million dollars world wide for Special Olympics through grassroots fundraising events such as this. Thank you for your support
